

Here are some easy fundraising ideas

Asking the people you love

Ask your parents and grandparents to donate to your page. This is the best way to get started! They will love to hear about all the books you are reading and what you are looking to achieve.

Share on social media

Ask everyone who donates on your Funraisin page to share it on their social media. It might be Twitter or Facebook. Why don't you get your parents to share something you found interesting from the book you are reading and you'll see it will increase your donations overall!

Help around home - running an errand for your family

Getting paid for chores is a great way to add to your fundraising. Could you unload the dishwasher for a week, or take the rubbish out, or clean out the car (best if it's not something you are doing regularly already) and ask for a $5 donation to your Funraisin page.

Can I ask again?

Sometimes people forget, so it is OK to ask again. When you do, tell them a new bit of information you have not shared before. Like a fact from a book you read, an author you really love, or maybe that your friend has joined the Great Kiwi Bookathon as well.

Bake sale or lemonade stall

Get in the kitchen and get baking or making lemonade. You may have a lemon tree or know someone who has heaps of lemons they could give you to make some lemonade. Or bake your favourite slice, cookie or cake to sell.

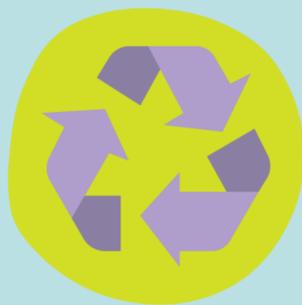

Get creative

Make some Matariki decorations and sell those. This is a great way to get into the spirit of Matariki on June 24th.

Car wash

Offer a car wash for family and friends and ask for a donation of $10.

Recycling for charity

Hold a garage sale, or ask for your parents to help to sell some toys you have grown out of to other kids who will love them. They could list them on Facebook Marketplace, post on a local community Facebook group or put them up on Trademe.

Weekend breakfast

How about organising a breakfast for your family friends. You do the preparation and they come along, enjoy the company and donate to your Funraisin page.

Whatever you choose to do, make sure you have fun while fundraising.

Remember you are helping other kids and their families who are blind, deafblind or have low vision.
